Justice

The first and third readings of today's liturgy speak messages of justice. And their loudest message is that God alone is true justice. This is good news, but it is not comforting. Once again, the liturgy is challenging our comfort and complacency, our lukewarm ways, our sloppy stewardship.

FIRST READING: Amos 8:4-7 RESPONSORIAL PSALM: Psalm 113:1-2, 4-6, 7-8
SECOND READING: 1 Timothy 2:1-8 GOSPEL: Luke 16:1-13

Comment

Amos cared a lot. He lived in Israel sometime near but before 750 B.C., in a time of a growing prosperity that was achieved at the cost of the powerless poor. And Amos was blunt. He reminded the rich that he saw their greed. They could hardly bear to waste a day resting on the Sabbath, could hardly wait to measure grain using the illegal ephah measure. They could hardly wait to lighten the weight of the shekel, could hardly wait to weight the grain with chaff. Amos rages against such wholesale greed and promises that such injustice will not be forgotten in heaven. To make a buck is one thing, Amos is saying. To make it on the backs of the helpless is quite another. Such avarice harms both the greedy and the poor. Both are ground down and rendered impotent in their ability to seek and serve God. One is weighted by selfishness, the other crushed by poverty. Money or the desire for money then becomes an idol for both, turning both away from justice and from God.

In the second reading, Paul reminds us of our charge and duty to pray. Notice that Paul's roster of those who have a claim on our prayers is analogous to the form of our own general intercessions (prayers of the faithful) as found in the eucharistic liturgy. Paul, however, is not offering a format for liturgical prayer, but a call to more expansive prayer, prayer that should mark the daily life of Christians within and without the liturgy.

In the Gospel, Jesus describes the wholehearted effort of a crafty servant who sees "downsizing" heading his way. The wily fellow greases the skids, as it were, and through a series of fabrications creates his own golden parachute. Jesus finds him a marvel and puzzles over why such cleverness is limited to the world of commerce. Jesus wonders why those who seek a "position" in the reign of God lack such wit and wherewithal. Jesus commends the manager for being astute enough to use what was entrusted to him in a way that ensured his future. As Christians, we want to ensure our futures as well. Jesus is urging us to use what has been entrusted to us to do just that. But Jesus also urges us to recognize that the treasure we've been given stewardship over is not one that can be bartered away—only given away, given and shared freely with others, just as it has been given and shared freely with us.

It's important to note that the Gospel addresses the steward's ingenuity—his focused, farsighted, clever, unflinching plan. Likewise, it's also worth noting that in biblical times the manager of a household was often a slave who had earned his august role and who, if he guarded the owner's fortune, was pretty much free to wheel and deal, skim and connive. The crafty manager in today's reading did just that, winning in the bargain the loyalty and gratitude of the creditors and leaving his master's fortune intact.

Reflection

It seems that we who seek the kingdom of God in the company of our friends need to be as focused and as careful as the steward in today's Gospel story. We need to assess the gifts we have and then spend them thoughtfully. Our goal is not to secure wealth, but to secure life with God. The gifts we have are to be spent and shared where they will do the most good and where they will yield the most benefits.

Hurricane Prayer

O God, Master of this passing world, hear the humble voices of your children. The Sea of Galilee obeyed your order and returned to its former quietude; you are still the Master of land and sea. We live in the shadow of a danger over which we have no control. The Gulf, like a provoked and angry giant, can awake from its seeming, lethargy, overstep its conventional boundaries, invade our land and spread chaos and disaster. During this hurricane season, we turn to You, O loving Father. Spare us from past tragedies whose memories are still so vivid and whose wounds seem to refuse to heal with the passing of time. O Virgin, Star of the Sea, Our Beloved Mother, we ask you to plead with your Son on our behalf, so that spared from calamities common to this area and animated with a true spirit of gratitude, we will walk in the footsteps of your Divine Son to reach the heavenly Jerusalem where a stormless eternity awaits us.
